History:

A century of progress

Like so many Western Canadian communities, Regina's roots can be traced merely by following the rails that reached out across the country towards the Pacific Ocean. It was in 1882 that those CPR rails arrived at the spot previously known as "Pile-O-Bones", and the name changed to Regina in honour of Queen Victoria.

Even before it was actually established as a community, Regina had taken over the Battleford's distinction as territorial capital for the North West Territories. Anxious to find a suitable capital, Sir John A. MacDonald had placed responsibility for making the decision in the hands of the CPR. And Regina was the choice.

The role of the railway in fostering the growth of the West cannot be understated. Even today our economy relies heavily on agriculture, and it was the arrival of the railway that provided the important link with eastern markets that made agriculture a viable industry.

Regina was incorporated as a city in 1903. Two years later the North West Territories were reorganized, the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan formed and the 'Queen City' became the capital of the new province.

The first century has been characterized by perserverance and progress. The city has capitalized on its vast agricultural wealth and then gone on to develop its strong, diversified economic potential.

Today, Regina is a city with many 'irons in the fire'. A city with a proud past and great promise for the future.

Location:

The hub of the continent
You couldn't pick a better spot to be. As a distribution point for industry, Regina offers ideal access to major Canadian and American markets. And, situated midway between Calgary and Winnipeg on the TransCanada highway, it is the best point-of-service for the prairie provinces, North West Territories and north central United States.

Close to 5.5 million people live within a 500 mile radius of the city. When you stop to think of it, Regina really does make good sense.

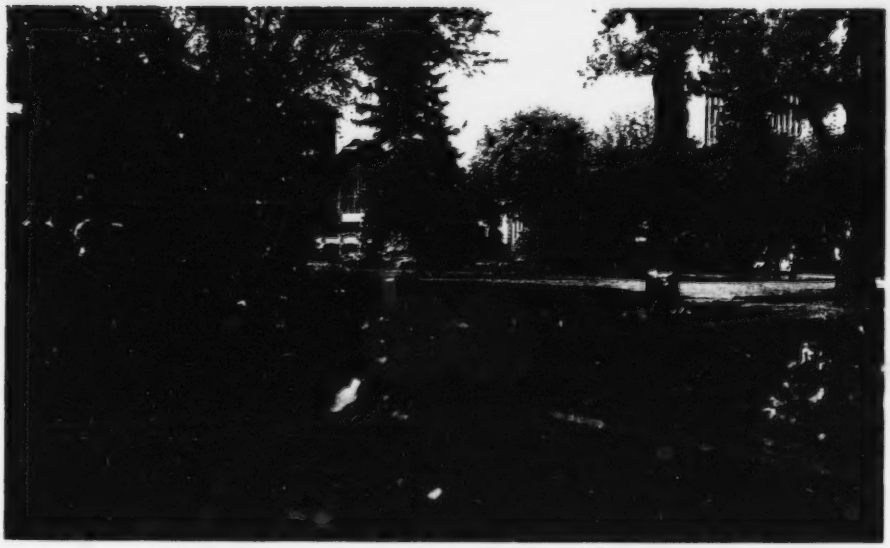
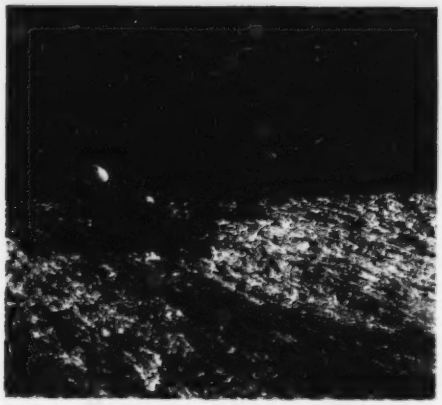
Climate:

Seasons in the sun
It's a city of seasons. Each with its own distinctive character. Warm, semi-dry summer days are sharply contrasted by January's icy chill. Spring and autumn are generally sunny and mild.

With approximately 2,450 hours of bright sunshine, there's plenty of time to take advantage of the exciting outdoor opportunities all year long. The frost-free season averages 107 days.





Economics:

Confidence in the future
Regina is well prepared to meet the challenges of the eighties. In terms of real growth, Saskatchewan is going to lead the country during this decade, according to Royal Bank of Canada projections. And with its broadening economic base, Regina can be expected to set the pace for that growth.

Employment A highly motivated labour force has played a maior role in the dynamic growth Regina has experienced. The city has one of the lowest unemployment rates in the country with an average of 4.7% for 1981 compared with the national average of 7.6%.

The Canada Employment Centre, part of the federal government's Employment and Immigration Commission, offers an extensive range of employment, unemployment insurance and immigration services through its three Regina offices.

Assistance to employers and workers includes a recruitment and placement service, job information centre, counselling services, labour market information, consultative services and unemployment insurance. Full details may be obtained by contacting the main office:

Housing and Rentals The Regina housing market is one of the most attractive in Western Canada. Housing is readily available and relatively inexpensive. The average sale price of residential properties sold through multiple listing service during 1981 was $54,942, an increase of 12.7%

Government assistance, both federal and provincial, is available to home buyers. The provincial mortgage subsidy assistance program provides a reduction to 13¼% on mortgages up to $50,000; and the federal grant of $3,000 may be available to buyers of new homes and first-time buyers of existing homes.

Apartment permits issued to the end of June, 1982 were valued at a total of $23,196,000 for 392 apartments.

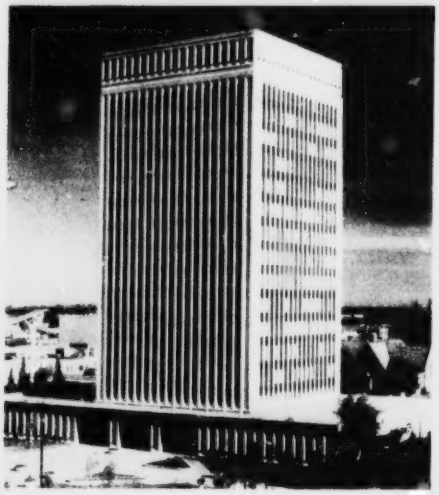
After the City's current expenditures have been determined, the mill rate necessary to finance expenditures is established. The mill rate is basically the amount of tax required per $1,000 of assessed value of buildings and land.



Development:

Shaping a bright future

Diversity has been the key. Beyond the agricultural base, Regina is a steel centre, a petroleum distribution point, a commercial, governmental and financial hub.

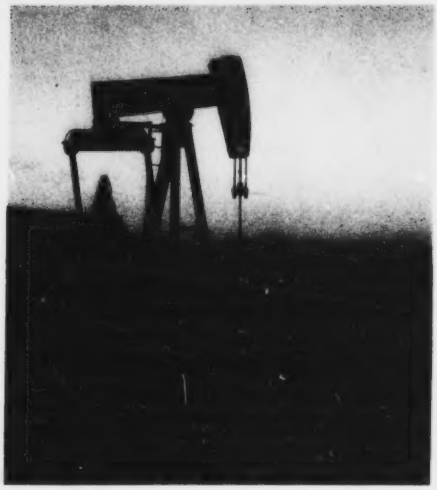
Rail Relocation Rail relocation will have a greater impact on future development in Regina than any other single factor. The program, the first of its kind in Canada, will ultimately free approximately 400 acres of prime development land.

The City of Regina's Rail Relocation Office has undertaken the task of co-ordinating the program. The first phase of the plan which calls for the relocation of the CNR yards has received the commitment of federal government funding of more than $20 million. The other half is to be financed jointly by the province and the city.

The second and third phases of the projects, involving relocation of the CPR yards and retention of passenger service to the downtown core will be carried out as funding is secured.

Business Improvement The concept of the Business Improvement District has provided Regina businesses with a means of participating in and initiating improvements to the business area. Funding is through levies on all businesses in the BID district. A BID management committee sets out the group's priorities in its annual budget which is submitted to the City for approval. The Regina BID district encompasses the area between Broad and Albert and Saskatchewan Drive and 13th.

Core Construction Downtown construction activity for 1981 totalled $23,141,660, a decrease over the 1980 total of $33,024,925. Major construction planned and underway includes 74 projects valued at $480 million: 24 of these projects are in the downtown valued at $195 million.



Natural Resources:

Tapping our natural wealth
Diversification of Saskatchewan's economy in recent years has seen the emphasis shift increasingly to the role of resource development. As the major city in a resource-rich province, Regina has realized many of the benefits of efficient resource utilization.

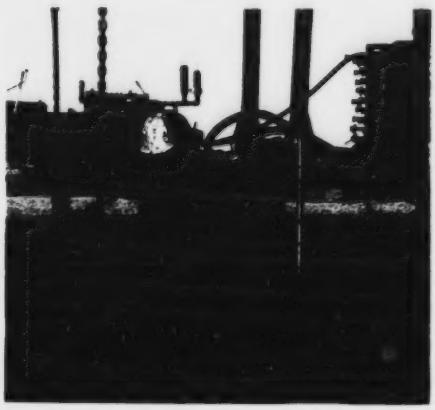
Oil and Natural Gas Second among Canada's ten provinces in oil production, Saskatchewan accounts for approximately 10% of the national total. In 1981, more than 1,498 wells were drilled, a record number. Southern Saskatchewan also boast an abundance of natural gas with remaining reserves estimated at 38.4 billion cubic metres.

Coal Another valuable resource lies in the large coal reserves in the south eastern corner of the province. The Estevan and Coronach areas, to the south of Regina, yielded 5.9 million tonnes in 1981 with sales valued at nearly $30 million.

Potash Three potash companies operate in the Regina region: Kalium Chemicals at Belle Plaine; the Potash Corporation of Saskatchewan at Rocanville; and International Minerals and Chemical Corporation (Canada) Ltd. with two mines near Esterhazy. The combined capacity of these facilities is approximately 7.6 million tons per year.

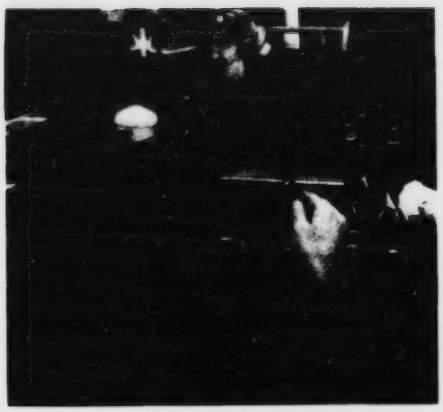
Salt One of the by-products of the Belle Plaine potash operation is brine which is reprocessed by the Canadian Salt Company for retrieval of sodium chloride. In addition, common salt has been mined at Unity by solution methods since 1949.

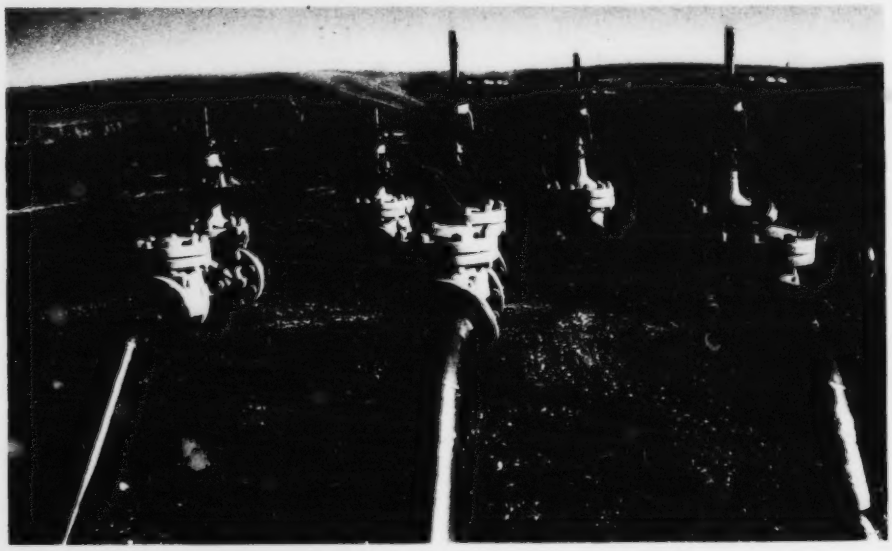
Sand and Gravel Southern Saskatchewan is abundant in sand and gravel deposits. Total production for 1981 was 14.8 tonnes valued at $22 million.



Processing of industrial use and brick clays takes place in various locations, Regina included. Inland Cement Industries and Western Clay Products are located here.

Sodium Bentonite Canada's only sodium bentonite plant is situated 37 km from Regina. Operated by Avonlea Mineral Industries Ltd., the plant has a design capacity of 54,000 tonnes per year. Bentonite is extracted from deposits by open pit mining.





Industry:

Entering an age of opportunity
Long renowed as a centre for agriculture and distribution, and more recently for its vast resource wealth, Regina is fast gaining a reputation for industry.

Among the many advantages Regina has to offer is location. Excellent access to Canadian and northern U.S. markets and suppliers is an important factor for prospective businesses. Within the province, there is the finest and most extensive network of highways in the country.

A strong labour force and a number of advanced training institutions ensures a constant supply of skilled workers. With respect to labour costs, Regina is competitive with other centres.

The assurance of long-term energy supplies is another advantage. Electricity, natural gas and oil are available at competitive rates.

Ross Industrial Park Industrial expansion has essentially come as the result of sound planning. The focal point of the City's efforts is Ross Industrial Park. With 1,438 acres of fully serviced land, the park is unequalled anywhere in Canada. And another 2,000 acres have been set aside for future needs.

The park is located at the northeast edge of the city, adjacent to the Ring Road, providing optimum access to the airport, major highways and the downtown core.

1981 saw land sales completed and under negotiation of 65.95 acres representing a building value of $16,962,500. Construction of new and expanded facilities totalling 295,670 square feet took place during the year representing $7,456,337.

The City's Development Department ensures efficient land utilization within the park by regulating building site coverages. The average has increased to 11,820 in 1981 compared to 8,100 square feet in 1977.

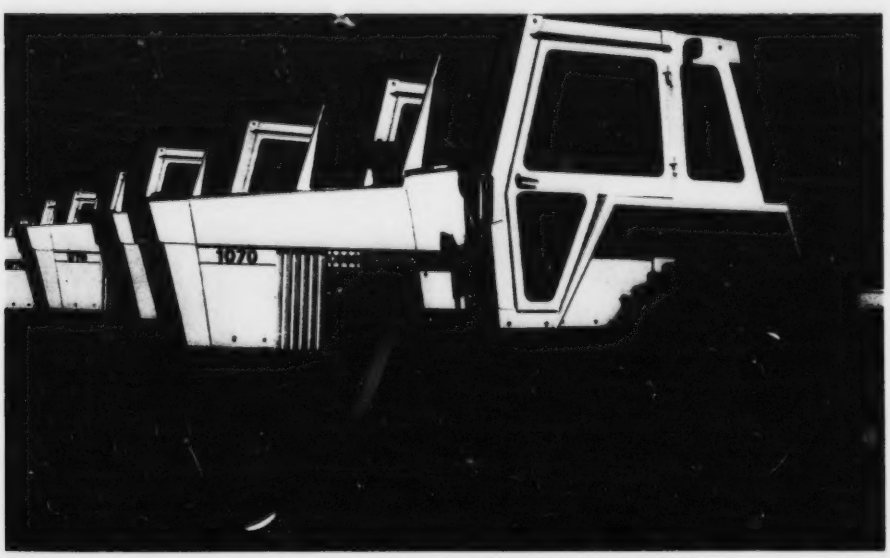
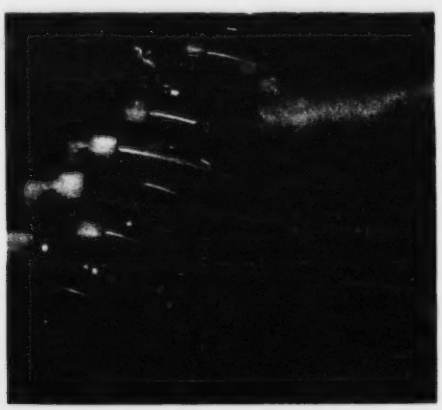
Another barometer of the park's impact is employment created. An expected 300 jobs resulting from 1981 land sales will bring the labour population in the park to 4,300.

Industrial Development Strategy The strategy for industrial development has undergone extensive review recently during the course of a study administered jointly by the City of Regina and the Province of Saskatchewan. Results indicated considerable potential for growth in the manufacturing sector.

Industries demonstrating particular promise include food and beverage, furniture and fixtures, metal fabricating, machinery, transportation equipment, chemicals and chemical products and wholesale distribution.





Quality of Life:

Where the living is easy You'll notice Regina's charm the moment you arrive. From our impressive and growing skyline to our 940 hectare Wascana Centre in the heart of the City. From our sophisticated downtown to our down-home friendliness. Regina is the capital of Saskatchewan, a province of the future.

Education Regina prides itself on a fine educational system. Facilities include 65 elementary schools, 32 separate elementary schools, 9 public high schools, and 5 separate high schools. French bilingual and immersion programs are also available.

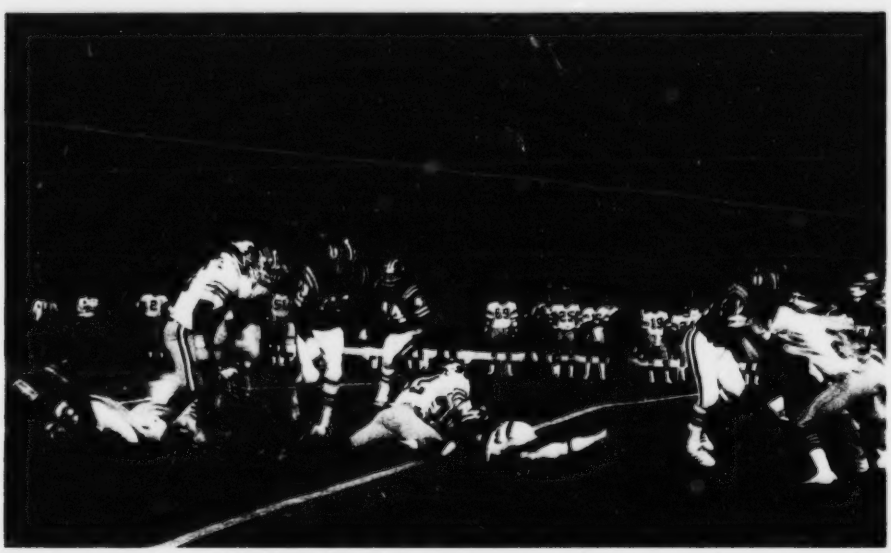
Specialty schools are provided to meet the needs of the handicapped and children with learning disabilities. A free dental care program is in effect for all children under the age of 14.

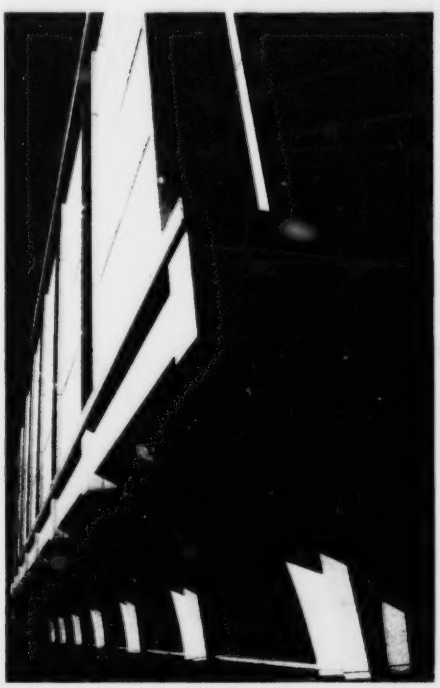
At the secondary level, the University of Regina offers undergraduate degree programs in various disciplines as well as two year programs in pre-medicine, pre-law and pre-veterinary medicine and graduate programs in six faculties.

Wascana Institute of Applied Arts and Sciences features certificate programs in health sciences, dental, agriculture and business education as well as extension and technical programs.

Adult learning opportunities are provided at the Plains Community College in such areas as basic education, high school completion, English, employment-related courses and fine arts and crafts. Course may be developed to meet specific needs of individuals or groups.

Recreation Recreational development has kept pace with the rest of the city. There's always something to do in Regina . . . regardless of your age. Organized programs range from hockey, football, soccer and skating to tennis, curling, baseball and the like.





The facilities are excellent and too numerous to list. Playgrounds, swimming pools, indoor areans, ball diamonds, golf courses, tennis courses and football fields. There's a place for everything. The City of Regina also owns and operates Taylor Field, scene of Saskatchewan Roughrider home games, and the Agridome where the Regina Pats take to the ice. Another of the city's favourite teams is the Regina Rams of the Prairie Junior Football Conference.

In 1983 the eyes of the curling world will focus on Regina as the city plays host to the Air Canada Silver Broom, the men's world curling championship.

Wascana Centre Perhaps Regina's most distinctive feature is Wascana Centre, 930 hectares of beautiful park, utilized all year round for a variety of events and activities. The attractive grounds surrounding Wascana Lake take in some of the city's most notable buildings — The Legislative Building, Saskatchewan Centre of the Arts, Diefenbaker Homestead, Norman MacKenzie Art Gallery, University of Regina, Museum of Natural History and the newly constructed Wascana Place, headquarters for the administration of the centre.

The park is an ideal setting for an envigorating run or casual walk. Cycle or ski around the edge of the lake. Sail, canoe or skate across it. Take the ferry to Willow Island for a secluded picnic. Or tour the sights on the double decker bus. There's never a dull moment in Wascana Centre, wether you are a resident or a first-time visitor.

Culture In the cultural vein, there's something for everyone. Globe Theatre has been treating audiences for years to an assortment of live theatre performances. In addition to its adult company, the Globe also has a school tour company and a drama studio with classes and workshops. A number of amateur drama groups are also active in the community.

The Regina Symphony Orchestra, the oldest of its kind in Canada, provides an entertaining selection of classical concerts each season. Guest artists from the international music scene are featured with the symphony on a regular basis.

The Saskatchewan Centre of the Arts, acclaimed as one of the finest concert halls on the continent, is the home of the symphony and the setting for a wide range of concerts. There's everything from country/western to ballet attracting thousands of people to the centre each year. The facilities are also suitable for trade shows, conventions and large banquets.

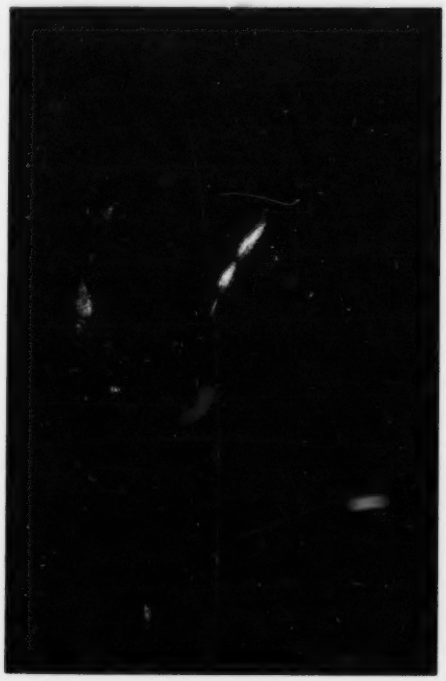
The city's cultural fare includes several fine museums, each providing a unique look at Saskatchewan's colourful history. The most popular are the Museum of Natural History, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police museum, the Saskatchewan Sports Hall of Fame, the Plains Historical Museum and Telerama — SaskTel's look at telephone history.

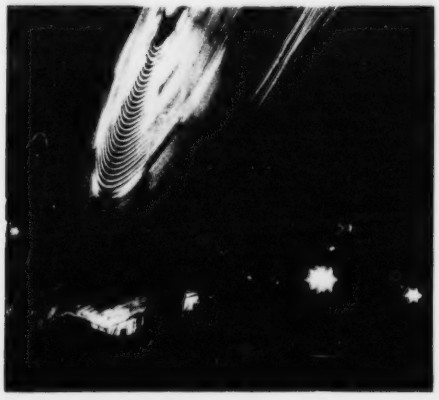
Celebrations There's good reason to celebrate life in Regina and lots of opportunities to do so. Three of the main ones are Buffalo Days Exhibition, Mosaic and Waskimo.

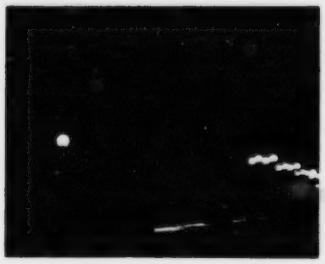
Buffalo Days is a celebration of summer. The citizenry takes an enchanting step back into time, dressing themselves and their surroundings in the style of the frontier days. It all starts off with Pile-O-Bones Sunday, Western Canada's largest all-day outdoor festival. And the exhibition takes up the rest of the week with midway rides, stage shows, dancing, and more.

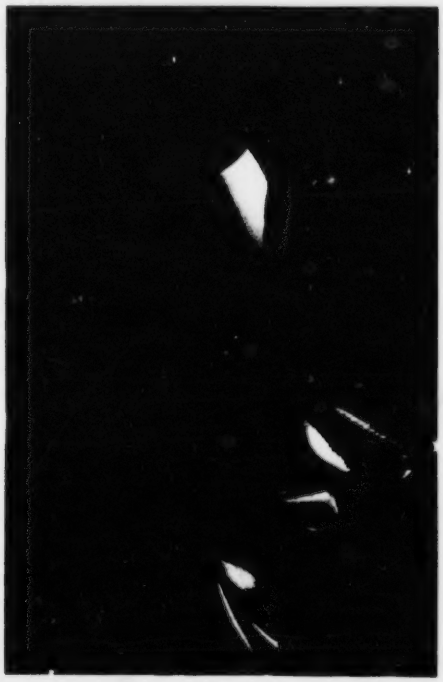
Mosaic is the festival of pavilions. Each spring the city comes alive with the costumes, food and culture of the countries of the world. The skills, artistry and traditions of Regina's cultural mosaic are placed on display for all to enjoy.

Come winter, there's nothing more pleasant than Waskimo to take the bite out of a chilly afternoon. Wascana Centre teems with the excitement of this huge winter festival. Skating, skiing, dog races, broomball, ice fishing . . . so many reasons to get out and enjoy winter.









Agriculture:

Filling the bread basket

The Regina Plains is one of the most fertile hard-wheat growing areas in the world, so it's no surprise that agriculture plays such a critical part in the Regina economy.

The 1980 Saskatchewan harvest, taking in all crops, reached 15.5 million tonnes, with 1981 expected to increase to 19.4 million. A substantial amount of that grain is handled by the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, the world's largest primary grain handling co-operative. The head office of the Pool is located in Regina.

Livestock is another important element of the economy with activity centered at the Reginal Public Stockyards. The provincial cash receipts from livestock products totalled $705,362,000 in 1980. The forecast for 1981 is $693,000,000.

Total cash value of all livestock sold at the Regina Stockyards in 1981 is estimated to be $32,670,361, a decrease of 20.6% over the preceeding year.

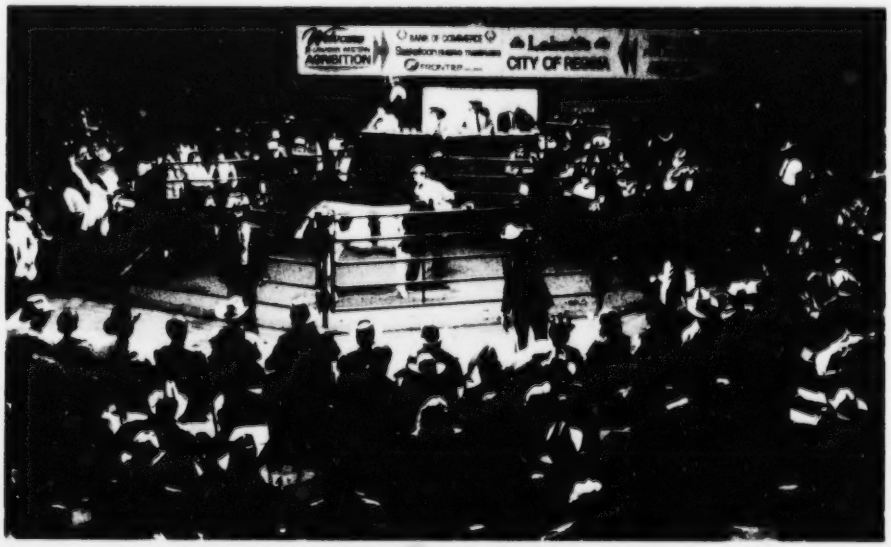
Agribition One of the highlights of the international livestock community takes place in Regina each year as thousands gather for the Canadian Western Agribition — a showplace for livestock, exhibits and sales. The 1982 edition will be held November 26 to December 3.

Auction sales amounted to $2.4 million in 1981. More than 100,000 people paid to attend the 7 day show with 19 different countries represented. The show featured about 1200 exhibitors. There were more than 4,000 head of livestock and 200 displays at Mexabition — the show's equipment display.

Western Canada Farm Progress Show In just five years the Western Canada Farm Progress Show has succeeded in becoming the largest totally farm-oriented exhibition on the prairies. With over a million square feet of displays and more than a million dollars of equipment, buildings and tools, the show is a major attraction each June.

In 1981, delegates from 15 countries attended, promoting a wide range of agricultural equipment and concepts. The show includes dozens of special interest exhibits on such topics as banking, insurance, taxation, soil testing, government programs and educational opportunities.



Transportation:

Transportation facilities are excellent. The same system that carries out wheat and potash to the world will take any Regina-manufactured goods to market. Industries which choose Regina are in a good position to penetrate the Canadian markets to the east and west, as well as the North West Territories and the north-central United States.

Road Regina is situated on the TransCanada highway, the major link between east and west. In addition, the province possesses a superb system of highways providing access to virtually any community.

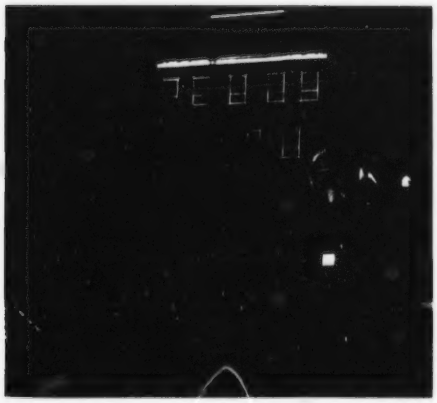
Three bus companies operate from Regina: Saskatchewan Transportation Company, a crown corporation of the provincial government; Greyhound Lines of Canada; and Moose Mountain Lines.

SPC maintains a fleet of 72 coaches, with extensive passenger and parcel express service within the province and charters and escorted tours throughout the continent. The company operates a special express service — the Prairie Shuttle — for passengers travelling between Regina and Saskatoon.

Greyhound has 12 daily TransCanada schedules operating east and west for both passengers and express. Moose Mountain has 12 buses, specializing in charter services and daily express and passenger services to south eastern Saskatchewan.

Air The Regina Airport, at the western edge of the city, is only 15 minutes from downtown. Passenger, express and freight air service is provided by Air Canada, Canadian Pacific, Norcanair, Pacific Western and Frontier Airlines. Flights are available to all major centres across Canada, the United States, in addition to Saskatoon, Prince Albert and points north.

The terminal was completed in 1960 and a major upgrading and expansion was carried out in 1974. A further $36 million expansion program is currently being planned.



Rail Customer service centres are operated by both Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways. Through a toll-free, 24 hour Zenith number, each centre is equipped to respond quickly to customer queries on transportation matters.

VIA Rail Canada serves Regina daily with east and west transcontinental passenger trains and with daily intercity between Winnipeg, Regina and Saskatoon.

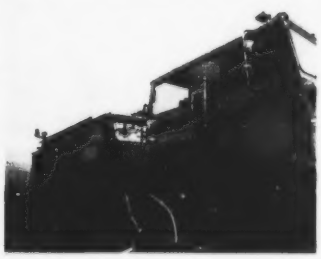
Telecommunications CN-CP Telecommunications provides a full range of communications services. Saskatchewan Telecommunications extend a range of services available in nationwide, city-wide systems.

Regina Transit The Regina Transit System has a fleet of 121 buses and 190 operators. The system carried 35,000 passengers daily in 1981. The fare schedule is as follows:

Adults	55¢ cash or 20 tickets for $11.00
Children	30¢ cash or 15 tickets for $4.00
Students	35¢ cash or 20 tickets for $7.00
Adult monthly pass	$21.00
Student monthly pass	$13.00

Regina has it all

- approximately 500,000 people residing within a 150 mile radius.
- over 100 chartered banks, trust, loan and finance companies.
- about 110 churches.
- a daily newspaper with a circulation of almost 70,000, four AM and four FM radio stations, three television stations and cable television services.
- a Customs and Excise office at 1919 Rose Street.
- about 20 day care centres.
- more than 50 dentists and oral surgeons.
- about 220 actively practising physicians.
- 1,185 hospital beds in three hospitals and one rehabilitation and extended care facility.
- six government liquor stores.
- ten movie theatres and two drive-in theatres.
- six regional fire stations with a total of 197 firefighters
- 322 police officers.
- a sales tax of 5% on most consumer goods.



City Services and Utilities
